

What are non-party campaigners? | Electoral Commission

Non-party campaigners: Council elections in Scotland You are in the Non-party campaigners: Council elections in Scotland section Home Non-party campaigners: Council elections in Scotland View the navigation tree Go to main guidance section: Non-party campaigners: Council elections in Scotland What are non-party campaigners? Local campaigns at council elections The regulated period Spending limits Reporting Imprints What are non-party campaigners? Non-party campaigners are individuals or organisations that campaign in elections, but are not standing as political parties or candidates. Non-party campaigners have to follow certain rules in the run-up to elections. The types of non-party campaigns There are two types of non-party campaigns. These are: General campaigns Local campaigns Campaigns for or against: one or more political parties parties or candidates that support or do not support particular policies other categories of candidate Campaigns for or against: one or more candidates in a particular constituency, ward or other electoral area You can find more information about the different types of campaigns in our guidance Non-party campaigners: Where to start . The general campaign rules do not apply at elections in Scotland in 2023. You therefore do not have to register with us or report donations to us, and spending on activities directed only at your members will still count towards your spending total. Last updated: 29 November 2022 Book traversal links for What are non-party campaigners? Non-party campaigners: Council elections in Scotland Local campaigns at council elections